"For God's sake," she yelled, clutching Dr. Weston by the arm, "you're not going to cut her open." Then when she was horriedly, hysterically explaining about the catalepite attacks to which Miss Moclabe had been subject, Mrs. Shannon, whose eves were fixed on the body thought she saw it move. "Look look look" she cried. "She's moving. I saw her move her arm."

The attendants smiled, snying that such movements were not uncommon in corpses, but preceding rigor mortis were almost a certain sign of death. But Mrs. Shannon would not hear their argument. She insisted that she had seen Miss McCabe in such a state several times.

Dr. Weston made a close examination, and then showly picked up his instruments. One by one he slowly picked up his instruments. One by one he slowly put them in his case, and, closing it with a snap, remarked quietly. "I won't hold an autopsy to right. I will not take any chances." He then ordered the attendants to take the supposed corpse into the hospital and wrap it in warm biarkets. He further suggested that a nurse be placed on guard to watch the body constantly, to detect any sign of returning consciousness.

His orders were obeyed and the body or woman twhichever it is) was placed on a cot in the accident ward and wrapped in heavy woollen blarkets. A nurse was stealled to stand guard and every few minutes the biankets were turned down and the body was examined. At 1:20 a m, there was no change. The body still remained as when taken to the morgue.

There is a strong sentiment among the legislators in favor of a short session. Both Democrats and Republicans will hold a caucus to-morrow evening for the organization of the two houses. The fight against Quay is being directed by E. A. Van Vaikenburg, the leading spirit of the Business Men's League. Republican workers are being brought here from all over the State to take a hand in the fight for United States Senator.

The hotels are crowded to night, and by to-morrow will be filled to overflowing. The Quay managers are on the aggressive and are leaving nothing undone to make votes for their leader. The anti-Quay men are just as active, but there are not so many of them, and their policy will be fully outlined before to-morrow.

The new Capitol, athough unfinished, presents a creditable appearance inside, and the legislators will be comfortably housed. The Senate and House chambers are large and well centifiated and appointed for the use of the Legislature.

onfident, although the Pack men, who are backed by the ardent adherents of Governor Pingree and the State administration, are talking hopefully of getting more votes than have generally been ac-credited to their candidate. The efforts of the State administration to induce more candidates to enter the contest, in the hope of drawing some of Burthe contest, in the hope of drawing some of Burrows's strength, has not been successful, and it now appears that the dight will be practically between Burrows, who is known as the Federal candidate, and Pack, the Pingree candidate, with the odds in the way of pledged votes in favor of the Senstor succeeding himself.
